

Coaches as Agents of Control: Problematizing Dominant Coaching Discourses

Jim Denison

Faculty of Physical Education and Recreation

University of Alberta

Edmonton, Canada

The case of Brian

- “Psyching-out” in distance running
- A Foucauldian reading of a poor performance

Sport discipline

- Training spaces in sport
- Training's temporal effects
- Sport discipline good or bad?

Conclusion

- Coaching's unintended consequences
- Problematizing taken for granted coaching "knowledges" (discourses)
- Social theory as an applied sport science
- The formation of a "new" coaching self